

The Arizona Republican

Coverage: 1890-1922

To see how the Southwest was tamed, start here.

From the dust of the territory's new capital, Phoenix, The Arizona Republican arose in 1890 to ultimately become the state's largest newspaper. Fighting for business, publishers of the area's early papers often duelled for readership with colorful, sometimes combative language and sensationalized stories. In one instance, it went further than words; someone actually shot at Edwin S. Gill, one of the Republican's first editors.

Delivering news about a changing world to its readers, The Arizona Republican focused on local and national politics and ways to make the territory a better place to live. It was instrumental in the campaign for Arizona statehood, which was achieved in 1912.

Reporting on events taking place shortly after the surrender of Apache Chief Geronimo and the fighting of the Mexican Revolution, to America's entry into World War I, the founding of the Grand Canyon National Park, and the roots of today's immigration debates, this historical newspaper provides readers and researchers with a unique view of history from a Southwestern perspective.

Illuminate history. Preserve the past.

ProQuest is proud to help you illuminate history for your users while preserving this historic newspaper for future generations. The Arizona Republican, like all digitized titles within the ProQuest Historical Newspapers™ program, lets researchers:

- Browse complete issues, cover to cover.
- Study the progression of issues over time with ProQuest's complete runs of historical newspapers.
- Cross-search topics and compare coverage and perspectives across all ProQuest Historical Newspapers, such as The New York Times with Index, Chicago Tribune, and St. Louis Post-Dispatch, for broader, often contrasting views of issues and events.

- Search for information by keyword, more than 20 article types (front page, editorial cartoon, classified ad, etc.), dates and date ranges, author, and more.
- View not only news articles, but also photos, advertisements, marriage announcements, obituaries, cartoons, and more, for added context.
- Print, download, and share articles and images in PDF format.

Focus on research instead of the mechanics of finding data.

ProQuest makes it easy for both novice researchers and information professionals to find relevant information quickly, with basic and advanced search options. Searches can be confined to 20 specific article types and dates to focus on the most relevant information. Each newspaper page is zoned into article images, and each newspaper image is supported with searchable ASCII text. Combined, these features mean faster, more effective searches for users. ProQuest digitizes documents at a high resolution to deliver clean, readable images, and highlighted search terms focus readers on the most relevant content.

Researchers can sort their results by oldest, most recent, or most relevant. In addition, articles that originally spanned multiple pages of a newspaper are “threaded” together, appearing as one continuous image and improving readability. Users can view and easily download articles, front pages, photos, display ads, and more in PDF format. The “My Research” summary feature can be used to track recent searches, save articles, email documents, create a bibliography, export citations, and create Web pages.
