Literature Online Reference Edition is the answer for ready reference and curriculum support. Only Literature Online Reference Edition offers complete, easy searching and browsing for all content—from journals and reference works to websites and KnowledgeNotes™ student guides. Here's just some of the content available in this new release:

- Full-text literary journals—147 literature periodicals in full text, including 80,000 articles accessible through targeted searching or browsing tables of contents. Journal titles include Poetry, Studies in American Literature, World Literature Today, and Writing. More than 20,000 full-text poems and short stories identified in these journals offer excellent support for creative writing and composition classes.
- Literary criticism—6,500 critical essays to support research papers and projects
- Author biographies—2,725 biographies of classic and modern authors from a wide variety of countries and ethnic backgrounds
- Bibliographic records—More than 900,000 citations from 6,785 journals in the Annual Bibliography of English Language and Literature (ABELL)
- Reference content—6,500 reference entries from a library of top literature reference books, including the Concise Oxford Dictionary of Literary Terms
- KnowledgeNotes student guides—230 guides to literary texts for students, offering in-depth analysis of a number of titles including classic works from William Shakespeare and modern works from Maya Angelou
- Website links—Links to more than 5,000 carefully selected websites manually indexed by literary movement and period, author, title, and subject

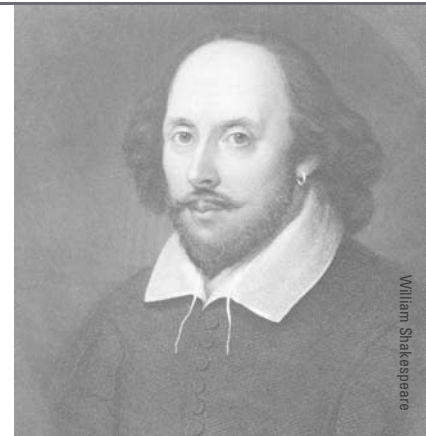

Helpful Tools and Resources

Not only does the latest release of Literature Online Reference edition offer the content your users need, it also offers key functionality to support research papers, student projects, and homework.

- Marked lists let users mark and collect documents for emailing, printing, or saving
- Citation software support allows users to export citations from marked lists to use in compatible reference manager software packages EndNote®, ProCite®, Reference Manager®, and RefWorks
- “My Archive” is a password-protected area that allows individual users to save searches and search results between sessions
- Durable URLs let users bookmark articles of interest for future reference. All full-text pages, author pages, and table of contents pages now have links to “URL for this page.” And durable URLs can be embedded into webpages for classes or research projects
- OpenURLs allow users to seamlessly link from citations in ABELL to full-text articles within the database and in other OpenURL-compliant resources
- Optional author alerts notify users by email when content is added for key authors
- Our new Information Center includes useful information and resources for users including search tips, details of content and editorial policy, and guidelines on how to cite articles from the service. Also included are free, downloadable MARC records, COUNTER-compliant usage statistics, and title lists
